Bipartisan Victory Coalition Probable Result of Election

End of New Dealism Is Demanded by GOP Leaders Today

Washington, Nov. 6—(AP)—President Roosevelt told a press conference today, in a brief discussion of Tuesday's election, that he assumed congress was interested in winning the war just as the president was.

The chief executive was asked whether the outcome of the balloting would make any difference in his attitude toward congress.

Why should it? He asked, adding that he assumed congress also wanted to win the war.

His questioner went on to remark, however, that what he wanted to know was whether Roosevelt would confer now with both Republican and Democratic leaders about legislative procedure. He replied that he had been doing that.

To a question as to how he would account for the election results, which all but took away the Democratic majority in the house and cut into the party's senate majority, Roosevelt gave a cryptic answer.

He said he had had a very pleasant surprise. On Tuesday morning, he said, he went to vote at Hyde Park, N. ., and he was perfectly delighted to find the polling place was open.

Some of those present thought he issued that remark as a commentary on the fact democratic elective processes still operated in America.

For "Victory Coalition"

Meanwhile a movement developed on Capitol Hill today for a Republican-Democratic "Victory Coalition" to proclaim a holiday on politics and drive toward the one common aim of winning the war.

The alliance would throw the power of both parties behind Roosevelt for the most effective prosecution of war, but the Republicans coupled their pledge of support with demands for an end to "new deal politics and experiments".

"We are willing to forget the election if the administration will remember the implications it contained", said Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader.

Another leading Republican, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, proposed the coalition, saying congress should create a "unified committee on war cooperation".

But while unity in the war effort appeared to be generally applauded, political observers watched for a possibility that house Republicans and conservative Democrats might develop a joint drive not only to halt "new dealism" but to erase some of its established works.

Three of Tuesday's Congress Contests as Yet Undecided

(By The Associated Press)

The Democrats counted 16 senators and 220 representatives today as elected by Tuesday's elections for the 78th congress, to convene in January, while the Republicans had 208 house members and 18 senators. Contests for three house seats were undecided.

The 16th Democratic senator elected was incumbent James E. Murray of Montana, who narrowly defeated Wellington D. Rankin, Republican.

Minor parties winning house seats were the Progressives, taking two places, a loss of one, and American-Labor and Farm-Labor taking one each.

The Democrats had 41 hold-over senators, to give them a majority in that chamber with 56 votes, to a total of 38 for the Republicans, who had 20 holdovers. There is one Progressive in the senate hold-overs. He will be the only minor party senator after January 1.

Three Close Races

The three house races still too close to decide a winner involved: California, 23rd district, Ed V. Izac, Democratic incumbent and James M. Abbey, Republican; Utah, 1st district, Walter K. Granger, Democratic incumbent, and J. Bracker Lee, Republican; Pennsylvania, 22nd district, Harry L. Haines, Democratic incumbent, and Chester H. Gross, Republican.

In addition, one gubernatorial race was in doubt, the ballots in Idaho having been sealed for an official canvass, to be made Nov. 23, when the tally showed Chase A. Clark, the Democratic incumbent, had 71,941 and Republican C. A. Bottolfsen, 71,646.

6 Crew Members Perform Successful Operation on Yank Submarine

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 6—(AP)—An American submarine, roving the far south Pacific preying on Japanese shipping, became a hospital ship recently while five of the crew successfully performed an emergency appendectomy. And only one of the five had any operating experience.

The details were related today in a letter written by Lieut. Franz Hoskins, 27, formerly of Tacoma, and second in command of the submarine.

Heading the "surgical staff" of amateurs was a chief pharmacist's mate, the only one of the five who had previously witnessed an operation.

"It was operate or certain death, for the patient had a temperature of 106 degrees," Hoskins wrote. "It took us two and one half hours and now the patient is convalescing in great shape."

2 Fatal Accidents in Freeport Yesterday

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—Edward T. Nolan, 79, former fire chief, deid today of injuries suffered yesterday in an automobile collision while riding in a funeral procession.

The accident was the second fatal one of the day. James Keesey, 72, was killed and his brother George, 70, was injured seriously last night when struck by a car while crossing a street.

FERTILIZER PRICES UP

Washington, Nov. 6—(AP)—Ceiling prices on fertilizer shortly will be increased about 8 per cent to cover increased costs of nitrogen and transportation, the Office of Price Administration announced today.

Present ceilings are based on prices prevailing February 16-20, 1942.

MUSSOLINI, HITLER MEET

London, Nov. 6—(AP)—A round-about report reached London today through Russian sources that Premier Mussolini left Rome by air late in October for a meeting with Adolf Hitler at which nazi Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, of the German Air Force, also participated.

Abandon Italians; Use Equipment for Their Own Escape

Steady Liquidation of Rommel's Forces Is Reported Today

By The Associated Press

Cairo, Nov. 6.—Three fast armored divisions of the British Eighth Army led by Lieut. Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery have driven two wedges through Marshal Rommel's forces and are fighting inside enemy positions.

The axis high command conceded that the allied offensive was nearing Matruh, 104 miles west of the old El Alamein battle line, but the British said officially only that the battle had been carried "well west of El Daba," 33 miles from El Alamein.

Tanks were operating at the heels of the axis retreat in the El Daba sector, a British communique said.

Portions of Rommel's armies which managed to escape the tank wedging and encirclement were said by Montgomery to be in full retreat.

This situation—of deep tank thrusts encirclement and hammering pursuit—suggested that the fate of the German-Italian North African Corps might well be sealed before the surviving portions could retreat across the Egyptian-Libyan border some 150 miles farther west.

Montgomery told of the armored penetrations when he received correspondents at his desert headquarters yesterday to announce complete and absolute victory in the battle of El Alamein.

Critical

Cairo, Nov. 6—(AP)—Gen. Ritter von Thoma, Field Marshall Rommel's second in command who was captured by the British, was reported today to have had dinner with Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery and commented that the "situation is critical" for German and Italian troops retreating west in Egypt.

The captured general and Montgomery discussed the campaign, sketching battlelines on the tablecloth.

Allied Victory in Egypt Heartening Roosevelt States

Washington, Nov. 6.—(AP)—President Roosevelt analyzed the allied campaign in North Africa today as having the appearance of a victory of major proportions.

He told a press conference he ~~thought~~ all of us, and all the United Nations, had been pretty much heartened by what looks to be a victory of major proportions in the Egyptian-Libyan area.

Replying to a question, Roosevelt said only a small part of the equipment used in the assault against General Erwin Rommel's forces was of American origin.

Probably far less than half of the equipment came from the United States, he said, and this equipment, he went on, has been instrumental in the advance only to a minor degree.

He was asked whether, if the British 8th Army were taken as a level of perfection in achievement and training, this country had anything to equal it.

We don't know and won't know, the president said, until we have had troops in action on a major scale.

He said, responding to another inquiry, that our operations on Guadalcanal island in the South Pacific could not be regarded as of major proportions.

The action there, the president declared, is on a limited scale on both sides because of difficulties in getting in men and materials.

But he said that the importance of an operation could not necessarily be gauged by its extent, since its importance might be much greater than its size.

Lone Flying Fortress Battles Six Zeros

Somewhere in New Guinea, Nov. 5—(Delayed) — (AP) — A lone American Flying Fortress battled six Japanese Zero fighters for 30 minutes today over Rabaul, New Britain, and claimed the possible destruction of two of the enemy planes.

The bomber returned to its base with 16 bullet holes in its right wing, one in an engine and another in the stabilizer. None of the crew was injured.

Among the enemy planes which the Fortress fought off, crew members said, was a strange "blackbanded" Zero which wiggled its wings in salutation before diving into the attack.

Lieut. W. A. Smith of Honolulu, pilot of the Fortress, saw the enemy plane's unusual maneuver, rocked his own wings and the Zero gave an answering wigwag before attacking.

Among the members of the crew was Private H. H. Poland, Rossville, Ill.

Holiday Ads Barred in Australia Today

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 6—(AP)—J. J. Dedman, minister of war organization and industrial research, announced a ban today on advertising containing any reference to Christmas, New Year or Easter.

The prohibition includes all expressions such as "Yuletide", "Festive Season" or any advertisement intended to promote the sale of gifts.

Dedman said the purpose was "to prevent a serious waste of resources of manpower and materials which would result from unrestricted Christmas purchasing".

Americans Jab at Japanese Lines on Guadalcanal Field

Pierce One, Threaten Other; Gain 2 More Miles of Jungle

By JOHN H. WIGGINS

Washington, Nov. 6—(AP)—Hard-pressed American forces stabbed at bolstered Japanese troops on Guadalcanal's broadening battlefront today in a two-pronged attack that pierced deeper into one flank and threatened another.

To the west of the island's American-held airbase, Marines and soldiers sucessfully attacked enemy positions, the Navy reported yesterday, slaying 350 Japanese and caturing 12 37mm. light artillery guns, three field pieces and 30 machine guns.

The offensive drive on Nov. 3 gained the American troops two additional miles of jungle. But a similar attempt to smash enemy concentrations to the east of the airfield on the following day was repulsed.

The Nipponese forces, put ashore on the coast east of the American base five days ago under cover of darkness, were reinforced by additional night landings Nov. 3 and 4, the Navy explained.

It was this strengthened force apparently which the Americans attacked on dawn on Nov. 4 and met what the Navy termed "an initial repulse."

"Marines are pressing their attack on these enemy troops," added the communique.

Fall Back in New Guinea

On another South Pacific war front west of the Solomons, Japanese invasion forces were continuing to fall back in New Guinea under steady pressure of an allied drive.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Australian command declared today (South Pacific time) that the ill-fated enemy assault which late in September had advanced to within 32 miles of the allied Port Moresby naval base, had been pushed back well beyond the half-way point at Kokoda, about 60 miles inland.

While bitter fighting was indicated, the communique said the allied troops were advancing slowly toward the foe's north coastal base at Buna.

Allied bombers also struck for the second successive day at enemy-occupied towns of Maobisse and Ailey in Portuguese Timor, northwest of Australia. The foe's Buin-Faisi area in the northern Solomons also was bombed again last night.

Second Witness in Flynn's Trial on Stand Again Today

Los Angeles, Nov. 6—(AP)—Pretty Peggy LaRue Satterlee, 16, the Hollywood night club dancer who says there's no use screaming if no one can hear you, took the witness stand again today at the preliminary hearing of Errol Flynn, the film hero accused of her statutory rape and that of another teen-age girl.

Miss Satterlee already has related her version of what occurred during that now-famous cruise to Santa Catalina island aboard Flynn's yacht in August, 1941.

She testified that Flynn walked into her stateroom as the vessel was anchored off the island, and said he wanted to talk.

"Then he got in bed", she asserted.

She was asked by Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler why she had not screamed for help.

"There was a kind of motor going next to my room", she said, "and I didn't think I could be heard above it".

May Have Kicked Him

She added that "I believe I slapped him on the nose, I might have kicked him, but I don't think so. I cried".

Flynn also is charged with the statutory rape of blonde Betty Hansen, 17, formerly of Lincoln, Neb. The state charges the attack took place at a party at the fashionable Bel-Air home of Fred McEvoy, British sportsman.

Miss Satterlee said the actor attacked her twice during the cruise but that she didn't tell anyone else aboard and continued to be friendly with the actor "because I didn't want to embarrass myself with people I didn't know".

The second alleged attack, she testified, took place in Flynn's stateroom where she said she had gone willingly after he had invited her to view the moon "through a porthole".

Tropical Storm in Caribbean Headed Toward Gulf Today

Will Apparently Miss Southern Florida Coast Resorts

Miami, Fla., Nov. 6.—(AP)—A storm, brewed in the tempestuous Caribbean, skirted along the north coast of Cuba today, but its main force apparently was headed through the straits and into the Gulf of Mexico, aimed away from Peninsular Florida and its resort area.

A wide area of storm winds—reaching hurricane force of 75 miles or more near the center—threatened the central and southern Bahama islands off the Florida coast and the island of Cuba.

The weather bureau at Miami said the main force of the tropical disturbance might pass inland over Cuba before proceeding westward toward the Gulf of Mexico.

However, the heavily-populated areas of Florida southward from Melbourne and including Palm Beach and Miami were threatened with heavy gale winds, although Forecaster Ernest F. Carson expected these sections to miss the worst of it.

Take Precautions

South of Miami and in the Key West area at the tip of the state, the threat was great and civilian and naval forces took all precautions to protect themselves against property or personal loss.

The worst of the storm apparently missed the Bahama islands where the Duke and Duchess of Windsor maintain their official residence.

The storm, centered in early morning at Long Island in the Bahamas, was moving west or northwest. If it maintained this course, it would pass in the vicinity of New Providence island, where the Duke and Duchess of Windsor reside in Nassau's government house.

Along lower Florida's Atlantic coast line and down the archipelago to Key West, vessels hurried into port. Storm shutters were fastened to windows facing seaward.

Miami Schools Closed

Miami's public schools were ordered closed for the day and a high school football game was cancelled. The weather bureau went on an emergency basis to keep the area informed, and wartime censorship of storm news was lifted to permit notification of all who might be threatened.

The storm apparently made up more rapidly than usual and the customary two or three days' advance notice was missing. Before daylight, however, the weather bureau began broadcasting its warnings and stormwise Miamians began protecting their property before 6 a. m.

At that time the weather bureau said the storm was in the vicinity of Clarencetown on the Bahamian key of Long Island, and was traveling at the rate of 15 to 18 miles an hour. Gale force winds were known and hurricane winds were suspected to be near the center.

Spiritual Observance of Thanksgiving Urged

Chicago, Nov. 6—(AP)—The Illinois Veterans of Foreign Wars urges the nation to observe Thanksgiving by ringing bells—to remind people that it is a time of thanksgiving to God for the blessings of freedom and prosperity that we enjoy".

Asserting that there was "no outward expression of Thanksgiving Day", State Commander Nelson R. Knudsen said the organization was making a nation-wide appeal for a more spiritual observance of the holiday. The group suggests ringing of bells in churches, schools and railroad engines.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

(This column, conducted as a daily feature by DeWitt MacKenzie, war analyst, is written today by Glenn Babb. MacKenzie, now traveling abroad, is expected to resume shortly.)

By GLENN BABB

The three-power axis alliance, dedicated at Berlin two years ago to the remaking of a new world ruled by force and terror, is being subjected now for the first time to the strains which great disaster exerts on such a combination.

While Rommel's armies struggle westward across the inhospitable Egyptian desert under skies made still more inhospitable by the RAF and American air forces, Tokyo and Rome are reviewing the worth and costs of their ties to Berlin.

Little doubt remains that the victory of the Eighth Army has brought us to one of the war's great crises. History may nominate these days the turning point of the whole global struggle, comparable to those July days of 1918 when Foch turned back the last great German drive and seized the offensive.

Britain's leaders, twice burned in previous moments of apparent triumph in Africa can be counted on to be twice shy about over-stating the completeness and magnitude of the victory in Egypt. And they leave no doubt of their conviction that Rommel has been smashed, that the elimination of the axis from Africa is in progress.

* * *

Today's sober British headquarters communique fully bears out the exultant announcements of victory which came yesterday from General Montgomery himself and from that "high British official" in London who doubtless spoke with the highest authority and on the basis of the most complete information. Where previous war bulletins have announced the continued advance of the Eighth Army, today's notes the altered character of the battle with its introduction: "The Eighth Army continued its pursuit of the enemy."

Then it notes that Rommel's mechanized forces apparently are abandoning their hapless Italian allies on the battlefield, where lack of transport leaves no choice but

Stalingrad's Defenders Renew Pledge to Premier Stalin

Moscow, Nov. 6—(AP)—The Russians said today counterattacking garrison troops had improved their positions somewhat in a Stalingrad factory area while the Red army maintained active operations on the Black Sea front and slew 1,000 invaders in the battle for the central Caucasus.

Two companies of tank-supported nazi infantrymen were declared smashed as Russian forces struck across a debris-littered expanse of north Stalingrad after repulsing enemy attacks.

Bombs and gunfire of Russian aircraft were reported to have destroyed 13 enemy batteries and 28 machine-gun positions within 24 hours.

The Moscow radio reported that the defenders of the city, in a letter expressing determination to fight to the last heart beat, said that "we are sure the time is not far off when we shall hear of the opening of a second front".

The letter was addressed to

Reds to Celebrate Bolshevist Revolt

Moscow, Nov. 6—(AP)—It would take more than a war with Germany to keep the soviets from celebrating the 25th anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution tomorrow.

Red banners, revolutionary slogans, portraits of members of the Communist party's political bureau and all other traditional decorations have gone up for the holiday.

The day will be observed with as much energy as can be spared from the main task of beating the nazis. All workers are to be given tomorrow off, but they will be called to work Sunday, their usual rest day, to make up the lost time.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Walt Disney and Donald Nelson were among Americans who sent greetings, the soviet radio said.

The anniversary of the revolution—through which the followers of Nikolai Lenin overthrew the provisional government that succeeded the czarist regime—is something like a combination of and American Christmas and a political campaign.

People get some presents and listen to political harangues. They already have had both. The presents have been increased supplies of food, distributed promptly upon the presentation of ration cards.

17-Year-Old Slayer of Two Little Girls Sentenced to Chair

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Seventeen-year-old Edward Haight must die in the electric chair for the slaying of two little sisters.

The Stamford, Conn., laborer smiled in Westchester county court yesterday when a jury of six men and six women found him guilty on two first degree murder charges. The verdict carries a mandatory death sentence.

The jurors deliberated 96 minutes after hearing testimony as to how Haight on Sept. 14 lured Margaret, 7, and Helen Lynch, 8, into a stolen station wagon, tried to rape one, maltreated the other, and tossed both into Westchester waters to drown.

Window-Washer Saves Life by Somersault

Denver, Nov. 6.—(AP)—A window washer felt the buckle of his safety belt snap open while he worked 90 feet above ground on seventh-floor windows of the U. S. National Bank building.

Instinctively he hurled himself backward and landed on the roof of an adjacent building—clearing a 16-foot space between the two buildings by inches. He turned a complete backward somersault, witnesses said, before landing on the roof, about 40 feet below the level of the windows he had been washing.

The workman, Eugene B. Grabbe, 27, suffered leg and ankle fractures.

OWI-Suggested Menus Too Bulky and Expensive Say Experimenters

Kansas City, Nov. 6—(AP)—If space in their refrigerators and cash in their pocketbooks permit, three Kansas City families will finish a whole week's test of government-suggested meat rationing menus Saturday.

But it's quite a strain, they admit.

Their comments:

"We don't need that much meat".

"We never buy that much; it's too expensive, too".

"We're not accustomed to that much meat; and the bills are higher".

And the mounting supply of leftovers, they agreed, requires lots of refrigerator space.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sayers; the Ernest E Petersons, with three children; and the Arthur W. Gilberts, with three children, began the test Sunday with menus supplied by the Office of War Information, specifying 2½ pounds of meat a week for each adult and lesser amounts for the younger children.

Sayers is a war worker; Peterson a utility company employee, and Gilbert an educator.

"Since Sunday we've accumulated a big assortment here" Mrs. Sayers reported in perplexed tones. "I'm wondering if that is quite right to do, in wartime and all. Maybe we can have guests and use up the extra".

Medical Society in West Accused

Washington, Nov. 6—(AP)—Dr. Sidney Garfield, medical chief in Henry J. Kaiser's west coast shipyards, said today that medical society officials had threatened to draft the company's doctors for the armed forces unless they quit treating workers' families under a prepaid medical care program.

Under the medical program, the doctor said each worker desiring to participate pays 50 cents a week to get company medical care.

"Orally", Dr. Garfield told a senate labor sub-committee, "we were told that 'if you take care of the families, we will declare that your doctors are non-essential' ".

Dr. Garfield said this "threat" was made by the Washington State Medical Society's executive committee. Under questioning by Senator Pepper (D.-Fla.), Dr. Garfield said the chairman of the committee also was state chairman of the government's service for the procurement and assignment of doctors for the armed forces.

Pepper asked if "the same man who is supposed to represent the United States in the procurement of doctors for the Army and Navy" is taking "advantage of his position as a public official to promote the private interests of the medical association".

"That's it", Dr. Garfield said.

Lock Haven, Pa., Nov. 6—(AP)—The stork made his 19th call at the home of James Roy Hill, 48, paper mill worker, and Mrs. Hill, 42, bringing a boy.

"Next one", he told the beaming father, "is on me".

Three Germans Escape from Army Guards; Captured in Barn Today

Bowling Green, Ky., Nov. 6—(AP)—Police Chief R. E. Monahan reported today that three Germans who escaped from Army guards aboard a train late Wednesday night had been arrested in a barn about 6 miles from here.

He said the men gave their names as Hans Richard Jonat, 27, Karl Luft, 19 and Paul Theodore Hitzegrad, 38. Jonat and Luft said they had been members of the German merchant marine and Hitzegard said he was merely a German citizen who had been arrested as an enemy alien.

Chief Monahan said they offered no resistance when Sheriff Boyd Downey and two deputies awakened them in a barn where they had spent the night.

The officers searched the barn when several girls who lived in that area suggested that the three men might be the escaped aliens.

The military guards missed the prisoners as the train neared Camp Forrest, Tenn., but were not sure when or where the trio escaped. The three men arrested near here said they fled the train as it passed through Bowling Green late Wednesday.

Chief Monahan said the trio had been turned over to agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

• SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Christian Background Rather Than Instilled Hate Makes Soldier Brave

Text: Deuteronomy 6:4-9, 20-25; II Timothy 3:14, 15

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

A Christian conception of home and the home life is inevitably associated with a Christian view of marriage. It is therefore appropriate that the last lesson should be followed by this on Christian nurture in the family. The passages chosen for the lesson are significant. Two passages are drawn from the Book of Deuteronomy, far back in the history of Israel, and the third is from II Timothy in verses in which Paul commends the wise training in the Scriptures that Timothy had had from his babyhood.

The Bible from the very opening of the books to its close is a great chronicle of home and family life. Even in crude and rather violent times we have the stories of rich and beautiful experience. One thinks, for instance, of the child Samuel, devoted to the services of religion by the love and consecration of his mother. It was this same Samuel who lived in warlike times, of whom we are told "that he hewed Agag in pieces before the altar."

At a time when in our present-day life violence and horror are so adjacent to all the finer and beautiful things, we cannot cavil too much at the discrepancies of a bygone time. But we can appreciate the fact that, in spite of horror and violence in the past, rich and beautiful things have persisted, and they will survive the tragedies of the present time.

Is it too much to say that the issue of the present World War depends very much upon the quality of the home life that lies back of military service? It is sad to think of the tragedy of young lives sacrificed to war, upon which so much of love and care has been destroyed. The sacrifice suffering, and loss to loving fathers and mothers, as well as to youth itself, is appalling. But it is the spirit of youth that comes from such homes upon which the future of the world ultimately depends.

Thoughtless leaders today are instilling hate, and are suggesting that effective military action must depend upon the measure of hate with which soldiers can be stirred to action. Such a conception, plausible as it seems, is against the experience of wars in which men have fought predominantly for a principle or a cause.

It was not hate that inspired the finest type of men who fought on both sides in our own Civil War— men like Lee and Pickett in the South, and like Grant in the North—nor was it the motive force in men who had the destiny of the nation at heart, like Lincoln.

It is doubtful whether any soldier can adequately fight for democracy who has not deep in him the consciousness that he is fighting for homes and for a way of life. It is this love of home and family and the right way of living, that, more than anything else, has made men brave and irresistible in battle. It is no mere form of words that associates home and country in the noblest aspect of patriotism and service.

I often think of that young man from a Christian home, the son of a theological professor, who enlisted in the very dangerous service in the first World War. He said to his father, "You know, father, I am very timid, and I would not go into this thing if I did not believe it to be my duty." The colonel of his regiment said to the father, "I would like to have a whole regiment of soldiers like him. That boy would go through hell if he believed it to be his duty."

That is the sort of warfare that is not endangered by hate, but that finds its strength and its irresistible quality in the things that are associated with Christian nurture in the home.

Jury Disagrees Over Minier School Chief

Pekin, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—Justice of the Peace Julius C. Janssen dismissed a jury weighing testimony on an assault and battery charge against T. O. Hostettler, Minier high school principal, Wednesday when the foreman reported that the jury could reach no decision after more than six hours deliberation.
The charge was made by Kathryn Hunteman, 15-year-old school pupil, who testified that her principal dragged her out of a study hall by the hair.
Hostettler told the jury that he had not used improper force in slapping the girl in his office after he found her studying a book "other than she should have been studying".
He has been principal at Minier for 18 years.

Our Fliers in Britain

As Pictured by Clayton Knight

(Editor's Note: Clayton Knight is no stranger to air war. He flew for us in the last World War, won many air battles until shot down by the Germans a short time before peace came).

BY CLAYTON KNIGHT
For The Associated Press

London—It begins, say, in some little town in Texas. A tall, lanky kid walks into the recruiting station for the Army Air Force.

You can see in his eager eyes that he's got only one dream—to wear a pair of silver wings and pilot a fighter plane some day with a sweep of allied bombers deep into France or Germany.

So they sign him up, and for nine weeks he begins to think he'll never even get near a plane, much less fly one.

Then, after those nine weeks of elementary instruction in aviation tactics, guns and other subjects the air-minded youth thinks of as a little stuffy, he brightens up.

Now he's in for two or three months of elementary flying instruction. At last that's over and, wonder of wonders, the big day arrives.

He gets his wings.

"Well", he thinks, "I'll soon be off to England and can get into the show".

But not yet. Not yet, by a long shot. He's still got to have maybe another 100 hours in the air to mtke his total of 250 before he can go with an operational squadron for several weeks of fighter training.

* * *

It's almost a year to the day since he walked into that recruiting office—but finally the word comes. He's off to England. His dream is about to come true.

That is, he thinks his dream is about to come true, because what he doesn't realize is that even after he gets across the big pond, he's still not across the English channel.

The kid from Texas finds that it's almost as much of a battle to get into the big war as is the war itself.

I learned first-hand what extra training an American flier needs once across the ocean during my tour of British, Canadian and American air stations in the British Isles.

He's got a month or six weeks to put in in learning the British "operational" technique — that method of getting planes out and back into English airdromes, around balloon barrages and to the right air field.

* * *

An American pilot undergoing the extra training necessary over here before going into battle was marvelling at the hundreds of airdromes crowded together in the British Isles.

Accustomed to the widely-scattered airfields in the United States, he said the one thing he didn't have to worry about over here was forced landings.

"If your motor cuts out anywhere, just shove your nose down—and there's a runway right ahead".

He was right. On the secret maps of England, with pins marking the airdromes, it's impossible to lay a ruler down edgewise in any direction without hitting several pins. And not one airfield that was there when the war started has been destroyed.

During the training period in England, the American lads receive instruction from American, R. A. F. and Canadian veterans on the newest tactics and the latest tricks for beating the luftwaffe. They spend their spare time much as they would at an American airfield. You'll find them kicking a football around, or just lounging around the airdrome—always talking shop with their Canadian and RAF pals.

The newcomers are envious of the records of some other American boys—the boys who didn't wait: The American Eagle lads.

For many months the Americans of the Eagle squadrons have been fighting the Germans. To do so they chose to wear the slate-blue uniform of the RAF, but now they're donning the khaki of the USAAF.

Chief reason for the Eagles switching back to fly under their own flag is one of insurance. As Americans, they weren't eligible for any insurance while working for Britain, but as soon as they change to khaki they can take out the regular U. S. Army policy of $10,000.

"I've been with the British for 16 months", one Eagle pilot told me. "They treated me swell. But my sister's husband just died, leaving her with two children to support, and I'd like to feel that if anything happened to me she'd be taken care of. That's why I changed".

Grand Jury to Probe Theft of Ballot Box

East St. Louis, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—The temporary removal of a ballot box which Republican leader Dan McGlynn charges occurred during voting in Stites township's poll is going to bring an investigation.
McGlynn said he knew the names of three Negroes alleged to have taken the box, which reappeared after a fight in the polling place, and that he would give the information to the grand jury.
He blamed returns from the precinct for the loss by his party of three contests—those of John Thomas for state senator, R. H. Huschle for state legislator, and William Horner for county treasurer.

CAN BECOME 3-B's
Washington, Nov. 6—(AP)—Three-A men can become 3-B's by getting a job in a war plant. Selective service officials say they hope to induce large numbers of men now holding non-essential jobs to shift to war work by offering them longer draft deferment.

By RUTH MILLETT

The government has given her warning that her husband may be drafted in spite of the fact that he is a married man with children.

And she has taken a "They-can't-do-this-to-me" attitude toward the whole matter. To her, used as she is to a man's support, companionship, and protection, the idea that her man may be called on to fight for her and their kids is a personal affront.

There are a lot of young wives like her—who, in spite of the desperate plight of the world, have just gone on figuring that their men would never be taken from them.

Well, they've got to get a new slant on things. For chances are their men are going to have to go, and the women will have to get along alone.

It will probably be necessary for them to give up their comfortable homes. They may even have to turn their kids over to their grandparents or put them in a day nursery while they get jobs in war plants.

It isn't a pleasant picture. And no wonder so many young wives still refuse to face it. But these aren't pleasant times. None of us can have the things we once considered necessary. And if we are to win this war women, as well as men, will have to make grave sacrifices.

Mothers Must Realize War Won't Spare Them

So the women who are still sitting around kidding themselves into believing that their lives are going on in the same comfortable way are just refusing to face the situation like adults.

It is a crime that homes have to be broken up, that children have to get along without their fathers, that mothers have to go out and get jobs in factories.

But that is what total war is like. Total war is waged against all people—and fought by all people.

And no woman can expect to be an exception just because she has children.

Shurtleff Will Drop Intercollegiate Sports

Alton, Ill., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Shurtleff college, which has an undefeated football team, will drop intercollegiate athletics for the duration of the war after a homecoming game today with Chillicothe (Mo.) Business college.

A game with Western Illinois State Teachers' college of Macomb has been cancelled.

Director of Athletics William Moss explained the decision was made because of transportation difficulties and the impending draft of 18 and 19-year-olds. On its one game away from home, the football team had to stand in a bus most of the way.

President Guy Wimmer said Shurtleff would follow the wartime suggestion of the Federation of American Colleges and substitute intramural sports for intercollegiate athletics.

A Thought for Today

Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages.—Luke 14:3.

If well, the pain doth fade, the joy remains.

They Asked for It

For a long time the Republican party has been on the outside, looking in. Now it is beginning to look in, and to have some influence. It is no longer to be ignored as of today.

As to the future, the so-called trend toward Republican principles of government will depend to a large extent upon the leadership, efficiency and legislative conduct of those Republicans elevated to office or returned as a mark of confidence.

It would be pedantic to say that office-holding in these days, with all the contradictory trends in evidence, and all the soul-searing decisions to be made, is no picnic as the Democrats and New Dealers have discovered. Yet in this case it may be pertinent to be pedantic, and we suggest that it has been a long time since Republicans held such responsibility as they now hold.

The people had a motive for putting them into office, and that motive was not based merely upon the fact that those newly-elected, or returned to office, are Republicans. We are pleased to hear from Mr. Hopkins or some of the other New Dealers that the wartime supply of aspirin is to be plentiful. The Republicans, now achieving a position of considerable responsibility, will need aspirin in the days to come, and plenty of it.

For Sufficient Reasons

We hate taxes, but we aren't afraid of taxes. That "we" is not editorial. It represents, in our (editorial) opinion the consensus of the American people.

If onerous taxes will help to win this war, and to avert inflation now, and to alleviate the pains of postwar rehabilitation, we, the American people, will pay just as long as there is anything with which to pay.

The newest tax schedules are the heaviest in history in this country. They are so heavy that they hurt, already, and still they are not heavy enough.

But our squawk is not against the impact of heavier taxes. It is against their destructive heterogeneity and unscientific absence of co-ordination and cohesivesness.

Just so, in preceding columns we have not been protesting against the drastic taxation of those persons fortunate enough to be in the big money; neither were we shedding crocodile tears about the imaginary sufferings of the more-than-$25,000-a-year earners.

We protested about the manner in which congress was defied and the courts straight-armed out of the picture. And now, reverting, we note one other important phase of Economic Director Byrnes' salary and wage limitation order:

It is not primarily an anti-inflation measure. It is not primarily a win-the-war measure. It is not at all a revenue-producing measure. It is, more than anything else, a share-the-wealth project.

Perhaps the United States is ready for sharing the wealth. Possibly in the midst of a terrible war, when national unity is most vital, is the ideal time for inaugurating this social experiment that couldn't get a foot inside the door until it donned the anti-inflation, help-win-the-war mask.

We do not believe so. We think redistribution of wealth is something that should be done, if at all, on its own merits, if any, and not in time of total war.

Inflation is not going to be cured by withdrawing the $180,000,000 a year which this measure will cut off.

The war is not going to be financed with that $180,000,000—would not be even if this were a tax measure, which it is not, rather than a social interdiction, which it is.

All that will happen is that a relatively few men and women will have to finance current expenses, in excess of $25,000 a year, out of investment returns or by liquidation of capital investments.

Don't worry about the few wealthy people who will be affected. Worry, rather, about what is happening to the incentive system which has made America great, to the constitutional government which has made America free.

Scrap

While fervent youngsters are tossing beloved bicycles into scrap piles; while men are taking the brass rails from home bars and veterns of the first World War are donating cherished souvenirs, the National Park Service is building a steel fence around "Ickes Garden" in the national capital.

"Ickes Garden" is a little grass plot in front of the south building of Harold Ickes' Interior Department. Mr. Ickes likes grass, and wants it kept off of (with apologies for using a preposition to end a sentence with).

We have not asked the experts to compute the number of ship plates which could have been made with the steel that is going into what, we presume, will come to be known as Ickes' Spite Fence.

Noots to Zoot Suits

We never saw a zoot suit, we never hope to see one, but we have seen pictures of them, on the basis of which we rise to roar three loud cheers for the WPB order which, in the Office of War Information's meaty prose, has "sounded the death knell" of the zoot suit.

The order was not an instance of sumptuary legislation or of aesthetic censorship. It was merely an attempt to save materials.

So what? Since zoot suits are banned, why should we worry about the chastity of the WPB's intentions?

DINNER FOR FOUR

CHAPTER XXIV

BLYTHE discovered that physical action in the matter—action of any sort—was infinitely better than the inaction and indecision of the past few days.

This duty before her was not easy to do, but she moved up the stairway to Nancy Hale's loft apartment with a feeling of satisfaction at last. The stair hall was almost dark.

"It's just a gray day, is all!" She whispered that by way of self-comfort. It was indeed gray, with autumn snow sifting down at intervals. The snow wasn't enough to be pretty. Its grayness was just enough to cast a kind of pall, at least over her strained nerves and feelings. She had the barest crumb of comfort from holding Pop's starting pistol, a gun the game officials used.

The 10th step creaked. Blythe jumped, almost comically. But it was not amusing to her. She stood there for minutes, or so it seemed, her heart pounding. She had to force herself to remember that there was no actual cause—yet—for alarm.

Nancy was out. Indeed, gone to her own mother's, to get baby Scooter Hale who was a guest this afternoon of Mom. And there was at least 20 minutes' time before the gamblers were due to arrive. On the other hand, she couldn't afford to be caught here in the hallway for that would disrupt all of her plans.

At the upper landing she silently tried the door.

"Oh--h-h, darn!"

It was locked. Of course it would be. Should be, in fact. Rather desperately she looked and felt around there in the gloom. She couldn't locate a light switch, and finally remembered there wasn't any. This apartment had been made over from a literal loft at one time. But her foot did touch something that gave a merry "Tinkle-tankle-tink."

This was a pull toy she herself had given baby Scooter, and she remembered its long handle of twisted wire. It just slipped into notches of the toy by spring action. In a moment Blythe had it free in her hand.

* * *

WITH the sharp end she dug at the door lock. It was an old-fashioned square thing, and by hooking the wire end between it and the door jamb, the latch was easily slid back. "N-n-n-n-n!" Her sigh of surprise and relief was audible. She walked into Nancy's living room and reclosed the door.

It was light enough to see well in here, but still gray enough to be depressing. She stood there a moment, thinking, holding Pop's stubby gun. Suddenly she was glad the cartridges were blanks.

"I'd do something terrible! I'd kill someone!"

This way, she could maybe bluff with it and accomplish her ends without having to carry a personal fear of the gun.

She smelled delicious food cooking, and saw that Nancy had already set her tiny dining table with places for four. Food was in an electric cooker loaned to Nancy by Mom Miller weeks ago. It would be something tangy and good. The table was lovely. It held, dominant, a vase of flowers, rather expensive-looking ones. Blythe leaned close to see a card dropped nearby. It had a florist's heading, and handwritten in ink it said:

Norman! He, not Duane, had sent them to Nancy! Even his note held his breezy, cocky air. Blythe moistened her lips. Odd that the flowers, or rather the note with them, should give her such satisfaction in this strained moment. But she had to admit that it did.

She leaned to read the dainty homemade place cards. Each was a little football sketched in Scooter's color crayons. They read Duane, Scooter, Norman, Muv. Muv was Scooter's own name for his mother, and so Nancy obviously had printed it in whimsy there. The whole table was intimate, cozy, nice. Blythe felt a quick little lump of yearning in her throat, then a horrid feeling that she was about to destroy a beautiful thing.

Why in the old Nick, she asked herself, did life have to do people this way? Why was it inescapable for her thus to expose Nancy Hale? She didn't hate Nancy. She couldn't! Not even when knowing that Nancy wanted to marry Duane.

"I ought to hate her! I loved him first, and I still do!" A rephrasing of that salient fact still didn't make her course easy. Here before her was a cozy table for four friends—quarterback, fullback, beloved mascot, adorable girl. Why couldn't it all have been as perfect as it looked! Blythe wanted to rail out wildly at fate or something.

* * *

TO get the calm that comes from physical action again, she opened the cartridge chamber of Pop's gun, inspected it carefully, snapped it back shut. She pulled the hammer back, then reclosed it carefully, holding the spring mechanism. She knew that it would shoot and scare anybody, even though it did no actual harm.

"Here's what I'll do," she promised herself, standing there in the twilight. "I'll hide away back in the closet behind Nancy's clothes. Fortunately it's a big one. The two gamblers said they'd come there, but they'll have to be near the door to peek out. It—it'll be a long wait, but I can do it! Half an hour at most. They won't enter the closet, surely, until they hear Duane and Norman coming. And when the boys are in the room I can take command. I'll have all the proof I need, then, to convince them.. And—and maybe—maybe we can work out a way to turn the gamblers in to the police . . . without letting Nancy get too involved . . . Nancy . . . and Scooter."

It was wishful thinking again, but it was genuine. Knowing that Nancy had agreed to drug the two football stars in order to get $1000 from the gamblers was the cause of lingering, gnawing pain. Nancy who had been an adorable friend. But, too—Nancy who had fallen for the man Blythe herself loved!

It was still a tragic, almost sickening situation for pretty Blythe Miller, a situation that kept her emotions more and more confused. There is no conflict like that within oneself.

"I've got to do it!" she whispered now. "And I better start. It won't do to get caught here or be rushed at the last second. Nancy'll be coming any moment. She—she will have to be here ahead of the gamblers."

Determinedly, then, with a heightened sense of adventure and alarm, she went to the clothes closet door. It opened without noise. She stepped more confidently into its darkness—it was almost as if she were hiding from trouble here, at least for a short respite and rest. She pulled the door closed again.

"Okay, sister, who are you?"

A man at her side said that! Blythe seemed literally to freeze with terror, and a strong hand grasped her arm.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc., reproduction in whole or part strictly prohibited.)

Washington, Nov. 6.—The Democratic congressmen were slightly dazed in their first comment on the election result. All they could mutter, as the final returns came in, was:

"It looked like someone kicked us in the teeth."

One ousted member attributed his defeat solely to the 18-19-year old draft. Another says he crawled through by promising eight gallons of gas on each ration coupon.

More typical of the general run, however, was the defeated Missouri member from a farm district, who was a sure 15 to 1 shot to win before the votes were counted. He did not know what happened to him.

The successful Republican candidates generally said in their public statements that their success was a popular demand to get on better and faster with the war effort.

I believe the explanation runs deeper than that. My mail furnished an advance warning of what was coming, and the reasons for it. There is a popular revolt in this country against methods that have been followed.

It is a revulsion not only against war methods, but reform methods. It is an expression of feeling that pervades, not only the small business men and the conservative element, those who, together, might be called the Willkie vote of the last election, the anti-new deal vote of 1940.

This one goes further—down into the middle class groups everywhere, and has spread widely into the ranks of farmer and worker.

* * *

These people are not "turning conservative", as the radicals say. They do not want to abandon the gains that have been made in social progress, but they have reached the point where they want these gains made practical.

They want this reform wave settled down to a workable basis which will consolidate and perpetuate the gains, rather than have it blown up further and further into every new heights. They just want some common sense about it. They want practical methods.

Every man in this country, furthermore, has been hit hard by this war in many ways, but Washington does not recognize it. Some have lost their businesses. All remaining businesses have lost their help and are struggling to keep going. Most of their businesses have been made unprofitable by tremendous taxation.

All individuals at home are suffering sacrifices of their friends and relatives to the service, but, on top of that, they are sacrificing themselves in many ways, in changed modes of living, food, work, transportation, hours.

I have heard no one begrudge these sacrifices, but their plaint and plea is for better administration over them. They want kindly direction, not arbitrary and unexplained admonitions.

They must line up every few weeks in a different rationing for this and that, haggle and scrape for gas, sugar, coffee, meat. They see themselves that administration is not efficient in the way it is handling them. They want better methods in this respect also.

They will get them, are getting them. As one wise Democratic leader said when he saw the returns:

"Now we have someone looking over our shoulder."

The election result, therefore, cannot be anything but constructive in the war effort.

Democratic congressmen who survived are going to the White House for some changes in methods of handling them also. They are saying FDR has failed to consult them, although they have their ears closer to the ground than Leon Henderson, Ben Cohen, Frankfurter, Hopkins. Two or three good Roosevelt friends are saying this out loud in the corridors.

They think also Roosevelt's advisers represent a wholly union labor or extreme liberal viewpoint, to the exclusion of the interests of other factions. Some southern Democrats call his administration "Communist" although they know it is not intended to be.

They, too, will get their wish. "Reform" types of legislation will never get through the house now. Dissenting Democrats will give the Republicans a majority against all that.

The president will have to consult congress before making his recommendations, unless he wants them defeated.

Prime example of the changing times was the defeat of Senator Norris by an anti-new dealer in a state which had been new-dealing before Roosevelt.

The 81-year-old senator got into the race in an indirect way. One day news-men, looking for a story, dropped into his office to ask if he would run. He said frankly he was too old, could not keep up the work.

Later, he was "drafted." His foes harped upon the interview throughout the state. It helped take away that halo of sincerity which had been his most popular appeal. His campaign consisted only of making three speeches by radio.

In truth, he probably ran for the benefit of his office staff as much as anything else. His employees have been with him many years.

MRS. H. W. SCOTT

(Contributed)

Mattie Oliva Scott was born at East Dubuque, Illinois, August 23rd, 1859. On June 21st, 1882, she was united in marriage to Herbert W. Scott and started housekeeping here in Dixon. With the exception of the first couple of years, all of her married life was lived in the present home at 118 East Boyd street.

Mrs. Scott united with the First Methodist church of Dixon on June 30th, 1895 and was a faithful and beloved member of that same church up to the time of her departure from this life. Her two main interests in life were her home and her church. She loved them both dearly and served them both enthusiastically. She was active in the women's societies of the church, was a member and regular attendant of the Neighborly class of the Methodist Sunday school and was also a member of the Thursday Reading Circle and greatly enjoyed the Christian and cultural fellowship that these groups afforded her.

Since last Easter Sunday the infirmities of old age kept Mrs. Scott confined to her home. During this time she greatly missed the privilege of church attendance and the fellowship that it involved and often expressed the hope that by the next Sunday she would again be able to go to church. However, she gradually grew weaker and became more and more dependent upon her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ida Morgan, who came to live with her and to look after her. She was finally taken to the Katherine Shaw Bethea hospital where everything was done for her that medical science could do. However, after a week's stay and without having to suffer any pain, the feeble flame of her physical life flickered out at an early hour last Friday morning, October 30th, 1942, at the ripe old age of 83 years, 2 months and 7 days. We who knew her best, know that she builded for her self a stately mansion in the skies and that her soul had started its journey to that "land that is fairer than day, where saints immortal dwell."

Mrs. Scott's husband preceeded her in death on March 17, 1934. There were no children and the nearest surviving kin are nieces and nephews. However, she will be greatly missed by many who were related to her not only by the ties of blood but by the ties of friendship.

As we think on these things we are reminded of the words of one of the hymns of the church that seem to fit in so appropriately just now—

"It singeth low in every heart,
We hear it each and all;
A song of those who answer not,
However we may call.

They throng the silence of the breast;
We see them as of yore,
The kind, the true, the brave, the sweet,
Who walk with us no more.

'Tis hard to take the burden up,
When they have laid it down;
They brightened all the joy of life,
They softened every frown.

But, Oh 'tis good to think of them
When we are troubled sore;
Thanks be to God that such have been,
Tho' they are nere no more.

Fair Enough

by

WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York, Nov. 5—If these dispatches have given an impression that Joe Fay, the hoodlum of the Frank Hague mob and the New Jersey chapter of the Party of Humanity, who doubles as union boss and contractor on some of the biggest war jobs, is strictly a lug at all times, that is incorrect and unfortunate.

Fay has moments of refinement, restraint and social hauteur as well.

Such an occasion interrupted his career of thuggery in September, 1941, when he gathered several of his friends about him and went off to Bermuda to attend the wedding in St. Paul's church, Paget, of an American young lady to a member of one of the first families of the island.

Fay's friends included William E. Maloney, the eminent Chicago sportsman, international president of the Construction Engineers' Union, of which Fay, himself is a vice president, and who has acquired through his devotion to the cause of labor, with an uppercase L, a stable of thoroughbred racing steeds and a wintering home in Miami Beach near those of his fellow townsmen, Al Capone and Frank Nitto. They included also Mr. A. (for Abraham), otherwise known to the police of Newark as Longie, Zwillman.

* * *

Zwilliam has dropped out of police circles in recent years, having married into the money, but back in prohibition days he was a very active figure and left several memoranda in the memory book of the police department. The data on Longie record five arrests on charges of atrocious assault and battery, including one with the additional notation of "intent to kill". All but one of these were dismissed with the notation "complaint withdrawn", which is about what happened in Syracuse last winter when Joe, himself, as indicted for kicking the face of a colleague in the union racket, a felony charge good for five years in prison, and the victim forgot to show up for the trial as the state's principal witness. That one gave off such a peculiar odor that Governor Lehman recently ordered that the papers be examined closely with an eye to skulduggery to the injury of orderly justice in the state of New York.

If a man is capable of atrocious assault with intent to kill and is operating in a town where the police work is as loose as that of Newark, the victim of a slugging who withdraws his complaint need not necessarily indicate that he was to blame in the matter, that he has made a faulty identification, or that he desires to forgive. He could mean that he is afraid the guy who beat him up will walk out of the police station and beat his brains out.

* * *

At any rate, Fay's friend, Longie Zwilliam, walked out of four charges of assault and was stuck only once, in which case his diploma says he got six months in jail and a fine of $1000 on Dec. 12, 1930. It is also recorded that he was convicted of loud and indecent language and got a suspended sentence on Dec. 10, 1926.

But in 1941 Zwilliam was very social, married and wealthy, and sailed to Bermuda aboard the S. S. Evangeline, a terrible old tub which many eastern winter cruise patients will remember without longing, to be with his old chum, Joe Fay, at the society wedding.

An American sojourner who chanced to be on the island, and whose occupation has to do with police work in New York, was astounded to see Longie among the English dudes of Bermuda society and remarked to a bartender that the encounter put him in mind of the morning lineup at headquarters and his old days on the safe and loft squad.

To Zwilliam's credit it should be reported that he conducted himself in a strictly gentlemanly way and did not commit no atrocious assaults with intent to kill nobody, and that the island was no worse off when he left than when he came.

Fay, too, is said to have conducted himself well up to a certain point and tore up money derived from his service to labor, with an upper-case L, with a dignity which was positively sensational. It has been reported, however, that he finally became bored, and with his traditional cry of "I am; am I?" took a swing from the floor and beat hell out of one of Bermuda's citizens, thus closing the evening with the traditional rite that scuffed up Dave Dubinsky of the garment workers' union at the New Orleans convention of the AFL, half-killed the mugg in the Syracuse case, and, in other times and places, has enlivened the proceedings of various union conferences and grand testimonial dinners.

JOSEPH W. STAPLES

Joseph W. Staples, for many years a successful funeral director in Dixon, passed away at 5:50 o'clock this morning at his home, 215 East Third street, after a gradual failure of health and strength extending over several months.

Funeral services will be held at the Staples funeral home Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the Rev. Fr. B. Norman Burke of Rockford, former rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church of this city, officiating. Entombment will be in the Oakwood Memorial mausoleum, where officers and members of Dixon lodge of Elks, No. 779, of which he was a charter member, will conduct the lodge's commital service.

Joseph W. Staples was a representative of two pioneer families of this section of Illinois. He was born in Grand Detour, March 28, 1871, his parents being Elbridge G., and Lizzie (Ling) Staples, the latter a daughter of Joseph Ling, who was the first engineer of the Grand Detour plow works. He was one of the pioneer residents of this district, coming to the middle west from Maine. The paternal grandfather, William Staples, was also a native of Maine and came to Illinois during an early period of its development. He, too, was connected with the plow works at Grand Detour and both the Ling and Staples families were thus actively associated with the early industrial development of Grand Detour.

Elbridge G. Staples, likewise became an employe of the plow company, remaining in that service for many years as one of its most trusted, efficient and capable representatives. At length, however, he retired from active business and went to California, where his last days were passed. Both he and his father were soldiers in the Civil war, enlisting as members of Co. F, 34th regiment of Illinois volunteers, soon after the opening of hostilities. The grandfather was the first man in the 34th Illinois regiment shot in the battle of Shiloh. Unt... SPORTS SCRAPS by ORTMAN

Coach C. B. Lindell has decided to do a little lineup switching against Mendota tonight. The game, at the high school field, starts at 8 o'clock.

He was not entirely satisfied with the results at Ottawa last weekend and hopes that perhaps a change on two will not be out of order.

Therefore Dale Frey is expected to get the nod over Fred Meinke at right half; Don Fish will probably start at left guard in place of Sostant Pierre; and Fred Howard is being considered for the left end role normally filled by Walter Knack.

Knack suffered a charley horse in workouts the other night which has not responded favorably to treatment.

With the exception of these changes, the squad which takes the field for the kickoff will be the same as opened the last four Dixon games.

Bill Haefliger will be at left guard; Frank Leeper is a fixture at center; Bob Hess, who played the best game of any of the Duke linemen in the Ottawa nightmare, is certain to be at right guard; Don Edwards is usualy a 48-minute man at righ tackle; Bill Goff will doubtless play right end and call plays; John Walters, whose bum leg has held him back for two weeks, has cinched the left halfback role; Floyd Egler has performed suitably at quarterback; and Bob Quilhot has no competitors for the fullback slot.

Seven of these boys will be playing their last high school game and will be especially anxious to close their careers with a bang-up triumph over the Silver and Crimson, a team which held them to a 6-0 decision last season.

An opportunity to raise their 1942 average above .500 will be an added incentive for victory tonight.

The Dukes have won three, lost three and tied one to date.

Mendota will be striving for a victory which would transform an otherwise disastrous season into a comparative successful one.

Leeper, Quilhot, Howard, Hess, Egler, Haefliger and Edwards are the seniors on the starting eleven. Other last year men likely to see action tonight are John Collins, halfback; Knack, end; John Loftus, end; William Richards, quarterback; John Van Nuys, tackle; and Pierre, guard.

PRINCETON WINS

Princeton successfully protected an early lead to edge out the host Ottawa eleven, 7-6 last night, and claim possession of the "unofficial" N. C. I. C. championship.

The Tigers started a drive from their own 20 as the first quarter opened. Capt. Bill Hanson, fullback, and quarterback Don Rumley packed the ball to the Pirates' 30 with Hanson scoring on a sweep around end. He plunged for the extra point that decided the game.

The Ottawa attack was stalled until late in the third quarter when the Bucs were given the ball on the Princeton 40 after an exchange of punts.

Princeton held for two downs on the 28 after which Hank Skoflanc faded back to toss a long one to Wagner who went over for the touchdown. Poulaki's attempted placement was wide.

In the closing minutes of the fourth period, the Pirates marched from their own 26 to the Princeton 16, the drive being sparked by successive 11 and 12 yard romps by Poulaki.

Skoflanc toted the oval to the 1 foot line where he was pushed out of bounds. With only seconds remaining, the Ottawa squad was penalized five yards for backfield in motion. The Princeton gridders, thinking the game was over, trotted off the field.

They were called back but held firm as the Bucs tried to plunge for the score. The game ended before another play could be run.

The rest of the game was even all the way, with most of the action transpiring between the two 20 yard lines.

HALL WINS

A completely revamped Hall Township squad won its N. C. I. C. cellar-battle from Geneseo high, 34-0, Wednesday night.

Coach Richard Nesti, who figured his team couldn't fare any worse than it had in regular conference play, employed seven sophomores and four juniors against the invading Maple Leaf squad.

Lewis and Panizzi shared the main scoring honors, each collecting two touchdowns. Panizzi also was acredited with 2 extra points, Lewis being held to one score in this department. Thompson made the other six-pointer while Cattaneo plunged for the fourth extra point.

Despite the one sided score, Geneseo held its own in the statistics department but could not pick up the yardage when it was most needed. The Redmen garnered 258 yards rushing for 10 first downs compared to the Maple Leafs' 203 net yards from scrimmage and 9 first downs.

DEKALB-ROCKETS PLAY

The Rockets and Barbs will fight it out for third place in the combined conference standings at DeKalb tonight.

Officially, these inter-division games mean nothing as Rock Falls and Princeton will be acclaimed co-champions of the Southern circuit and DeKalb and Ottawa will receive co-titlist laurels for the Northern half.

Coin tosses determined which schools would meet in the playoffs.

Dire Forecast of Second-Rate Football False

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—All those dire predictions of second-rate football early this fall because various conferences and independent elevens augmented their slender supply of gridiron talent by use of freshmen aren't borne out in a survey made by the Associated Press.

Taking 20 of the schools in the informal Eastern sector, the Southeast and the Rocky Mountain's Big Seven conferences where the yearlings this season have equal playing rights with upper classmen, it was discovered that the 1942 elevens are stronger on offense and weaker on defense than those same teams were a year ago.

As a double check, a similar survey was made of the games played this season and last by Big Ten, Pacific Coast and Southwestern Conference clubs, which do not use freshmen.

Higher Average

The 20 teams which now use freshmen participated in 113 games before Nov. 1 last year with an average score of 17 to 8. This season the same clubs had competed in 120 contests as they turned into November, with the average score 18 to 11.

A year ago the Big Ten, Pacific Coast and Southwest members had blocked and tackled their way to 132 decisions with the average score 17 to 11. This fall in 154 games, the mean has been 15 to 10.

"Every kid likes to run with the ball and it doesn't take much coaching to show him how to do it correctly," said Columbia Coach Lou Little in discussing freshmen footballers, "but it is different when it comes to defense."

His reasoning probably explains the increase in offense and the weaker defenses of the freshmen-using teams but there was no immediate explanation for the slump in scoring and the corresponding tighter defenses of the non-frosh clubs as compared to their 1941 records.

Brown Looks at Pitt Game as 'Big Test'

Outcome of Tilt May Decide Bucks' Fate in Big Ten Race

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

Chicago, Nov. 6—(AP)—Coach Paul Brown of Ohio State regards his game with Pittsburgh tomorrow as a "big test," figuring that so much hinges on the outcome that it may decide the Buckeyes' fate in the Western Conference title cnase.

"It takes a great team to come back after being counted out in one game," Brown explained, trying to wipe away the taste of defeat meted out by Wisconsin last week. "I think my team will bounce back and win—it means a lot to us."

Looking toward their three remaining games on successive Saturdays after the affair with the Panthers, the Buckeyes need a shot in the arm of confidence. They meet Illinois at Cleveland, Michigan and the Iowa Seahawks. The psychological temperament which grows from victories is what the Bucks will be seeking with a win over Pitt.

Would Have Chance

Although not underestimating the Panthers, Brown believed a victory would set up his boys for the crucial conference tiffs with the Illini and Wolverines. By beating these two rivals, the Buckeyes would have a record of only one defeat in six Big Ten games and a good chance to claim the championship.

Rounding out Saturday's program:

Illinois at Northwestern—Although the Illini hold an edge of 17 wins against 15 for the Wildcats they have not gained a decision over the Purple since 1937 . . . Hapless Northwestern searches for its first Big Ten triumph in this 50th anniversary game with five regulars handicapped with injuries, including its ace offensive threat, Otto Graham. . . .

Wisconsin at Iowa—the Badgers, flushed with an unbeaten record, should get its pass defense network thoroughly tested by Iowa's Tom Farmer . . . It will be a question of the Hawkeyes stopping sophomore "Crazy Legs" Hirsch, one of the country's finest break-away runners, and powerful Pat Harder . . . Farmer may be rushed considerably in his passing by the Badgers' play-busting end, Dave Schreiner . . . .

Pointing Towards Upset

Indiana at Minnesota—the Hoosiers, usually good for an upset each season, are pointing heavily for one against the Gophers with hopes pinned on Bullet Bob Cowan, their top scorer, and Billy Hillenbrand, who has tossed seven touchdown passes this fall.

Harvard at Michigan—Although the Wolverines' Tom Kuzma is rounding into shape after a spell with an injured ankle, he may be withheld from the Harvard encounter . . .Michigan appears dead sure on winning.

Great Lakes at Purdue—Lieut. Paul Hinkle puts his big Bluejackets against the Boilermakers in his quest for a first personal victory . . . Abandoning the two team system, Hinkle will stand pat on his Great Lakes lineup which smashed Missouri last week, 17 to 0. . . . .

All Prophet—No Loss

ROUND Sports UP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Nov. 6—(AP)—That idea of having Eastern and Western major leagues next season is as dead as a slow-footed nazi in Egypt, but while it lasted it did show up one of baseball's greatest weaknesses—the guys who run the game...Reading some comments in this week's "Sporting News" we've reached the conclusion that some of the reactions were at least as silly as the idea.. Or don't they remember how they hollered "no" when such popular innovations as night baseball came along?...Regardless of the merits of the idea, we can't see the point of such statements as Sam Breadon's "If ever we have to come to that, let us lock the gates."...We like steak for dinner, too, but we wouldn't keep our mouth shut for the duration rather than eat hamburger.

BAKER'S HALF DOZEN

Duke Coleman of Excelsior, W. Va., reports that when he covered a high school football game between Gary and Graham, Va., recently, he found that the Graham team was composed of six regulars and one substitute, all named Saunders...They're all brothers and good enough to win four out of five games...Wonder what the referee did when that sub came in and reported: "Saunders in for Saunders."

NUMB NUMBERS

There's an old yarn about a footballer who was being given a special examination by the college dean..."Young man, what is the sum of seven and seven?" the dean asked...The gridder thought hard and responded, "Twelve."... Just then the football coach broke in, "Aw, let him pass, dean. He only missed it by one."...What brings this up is a report from Akron, O., about a high school coach who sent in one sub during a hot game and took out two players...He didn't discover the error until two plays had been run and when he finally sent in the eleventh man, his team was penalized for taking too many times out...In this connection, Jim Schlemmer of the Akron Beacon-Journal points out that Coach Rosy Starn of Kent state college was a bit smarter. Finding he had twelve men on the field, Rosy sent in two subs and while they were reporting beckoned three players to the sidelines.

Duck Population Along Illinois River Rises to 500,000 in Week

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—Although the duck population of the Illinois river valley has risen 500,000 in the last week, most of the 2,100,000 birds are concentrated on a few large lakes, Frank C. Bellrose, Jr., Illinois natural history survey game technician, reported.

Lack of natural food and low water in some instances caused a decline in the number of ducks on small lakes.

Bellrose said comparison of records of previous years with present flight figures indicated about 35 per cent of the mallard flight had arrived. This week marked the arrival of snow and blue geese and such northern diving birds as goldeneyes, buffleheads and white winger scoters.

After an inspection trip Bellrose gave this picture of the duck situation in the Illinois river valley.

Distribution

Hennepin to Henry: 550,000 ducks, 95 per cent mallards. This figure represents a large increase for this region over a week ago.

Henry to Lacon: 7,000 ducks, 35 per cent ruddies, 25 per cent lesser scaups, 20 per cent mallards, 15 per cent canvasbacks.

Lacon to Chillicothe: 55,000 ducks, 70 per cent mallards, 15 per cent baldpates. Most of the birds are on Round pond and Rice pond.

Chillicothe to Peoria: 480,000 diving ducks, about the same as a week ago, 90 per cent of them bluebills, 5 per cent canvasbacks.

Peoria to Havana: 850,000 ducks, principally mallards, and concentrated for the most part on the Lake Chautauqua national wildlife refuge. This is a great increase over a week ago.

Havana to Browning: 175,000 ducks, concentrated about equally on Grand island, Stewart lake, Ingram lake and Crane lake. About 15,000 of these are ringnecks, 10,000 pintails, 2,000 baldpates, and most of the rest mallards.

Browning to Meredosia: The smallest number of ducks found here at this season in recent years. Only about 6,000 ducks, mostly mallards, lesser scaups, and ringnecks, a decrease of 24,000 in the past week.

Makes a Liar of Nickname

South Bend, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Corwin "Corny" Clatt, Notre Dame sophomore fullback, had a hard time living down his nickname until injuries to several backfield men gave him a starting berth, then he proved he wasn't "Corny" on the gridiron.

He leads the Irish in rushing with 267 yards on 66 attempts. He made 80 in 25 thrusts against Navy last week on a slippery turf. His yardage was 18 more than Navy's combined effort and 41 more than his backfield mates could gather.

USELESS STADIUM

Hamilton, N. Y.—Although Colgate dedicated a million-dollar stadium last year, the Red Raiders scheduled only one game in it this fall—the opener with St. Lawrence. Transportation difficulties and the inaccessibility of Hamilton caused nine games to be booked away from home.

Ray Robinson 5-12 Favorite to Win Tonite

New York, Nov. 6—(AP)—Although Ray Robinson, Harlem's tap-dancing, zoot-suited fighter, is a 5 to 12 favorite to win his 38th consecutive professional bout tonight approximately 10,000 fans are expected for his 10-round scrap with Vic Dellicurti in Madison Square Garden.

It will be Robinson's second start in the middleweight ranks, having easily polished off Jake Lamotta recently.

Dellicurti will weigh in the neighborhood of 156 while Robinson will come in at about 144. Dellicurti, stopped only by Steve Belloise, is only a squat 5 foot seven, however, while Robinson towers to 5 feet, 11¾ inches.

Despite the general odds against him, Dellicurti is regarded by some as having the style which will trouble Robinson.

He is a sturdy, rugged two-fisted fighter who prefers to do his slugging at close range with the mid-section as the target. Although others have tried the same style of attack against Sugar Ray, he has gone unbeaten in 125 amateur and 37 pro bouts.

Barker Sees Tough Game for Badgers

Also Predicts Army Will Give Notre Dame a Battle

By HERB BARKER

New York, Nov. 6—(AP)—Taking the weekly aim in the general direction of football winners (and hitting some, perhaps):

Wisconsin-Iowa: Not as easy as some might think. It seems certain that Wisconsin will have lost some of its fine edge after the victory over Ohio State and Iowa boasts a real scoring punch when Tommy Farmer's pitching arm is in shape. Still, a vote for Harder, Hirsch, Schreiner and Wisconsin.

Notre Dame-Army: Normally this is close every year. It probably will be again. Despite the Penn defeat, Army is a well-rounded outfit and should extend the Irish to the limit. Doubtfully, Notre Dame.

Texas-Baylor: This guesser goes along with Texas on this one.

Georgia-Florida: There is entirely too much class in the Georgia ensemble to permit any choice but Georgia.

Kentucky-Georgia Tech: Georgia Tech.

Pitt-Ohio State: This seems to come under the head of unfair competition. Ohio State.

Indiana-Minnesota: The Gophers are clicking in accustomed style now and that spells trouble for the Hoosiers. Minnesota.

South Carolina-Alabama: The Gamecocks have been a disappointment. Alabama.

Navy-Penn: No reason to expect Navy to do more than make it close. Penn.

California-Southern California: Throw out the form charts here. California seems to have pulled itself together finally. The Trojans have had two weeks to get ready. All of which leaves us just where we started. On the flip of a coin, Southern California.

Harvard-Michigan: Perhaps this will be no run-away but there's no reason to believe the easterners can cope successfully with the Wolverines. Michigan.

Missouri-Nebraska: This should settle the Big Six race. A solid vote for Missouri, last year's titleholder.

Louisiana State-Fordham: We'll take a flier on L. S. U.

Colgate-Columbia: Colgate.

Cornell-Yale: Yale.

Dartmouth-Princeton: No real surprise either way. Resorting to the coin . . . Princeton.

Great Lakes-Purdue: The edge belongs to the Sailors. Great Lakes.

Michigan State - Washington State: It's a long ride for the Spartans and for that reason alone, Washington State.

Northwestern - Illinois: Eenie, meenie . . . Illinois.

Texas Christian-Texas Tech: Should be T. C. U.

Skipping over the chalklines otherwise: Villanova over Iowa State; Tennessee over Cincinnati; Iowa naval over Ft. Knox; Kansas over Washington (St. Louis); Marquette over Manhattan.

I.H.S.A. Votes Unanimously Its Approval

Only 35 Principals Indicated They Were Not in Favor

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—Despite transportation difficulties arising from war time gasoline rationing and tire conservation, the Illinois High School Association has voted unanimously to continue the state wide system of basketball tournaments.

The board of control of the state group announced the decision last night, acting in the light of a state-wide poll of school principals conducted by Al Willis, executive secretary of the I. H. S. A.

More than 600 principals responded in favor of retention of the present tournament plan and only 35 indicated they would not be interested in competing this year.

To Continue Sessions

The board was to continue its session today and was expected to make decisions regarding other state directed events. Among other things up for deliberation was a proposal which would forbid high school athletes from participating in the promotion or direction of all-star basketball games unless such games had I. H. S. A. sanction.

A revision in the financial arrangement which would insure the state association and host schools against losses was the only change in the conduct of the basketball tournaments. The tournaments involve a month long elimination series starting with 60 district meets to decide 16 finalists for the state tournament proper.

Principals of the Big Twelve, one of the state's top ranking high school conferences, also are meeting today. They voted last night to abolish the conference basketball championship because of travel problems, and also abandoned golf, tennis, wrestling and swimming championships.

The game precedes other Chicago inaugurals by about one month. The Navy quintet is making an early start because of the heavy schedule of more than 30 contests.

Church Societies

Aid Society—Members of the St. James Aid society were entertained at the Garfield Topper home on Wednesday. Mrs. Lindeman, Mrs. Edward Whitney and Mandana Green were Mrs. Toppers co-hostesses.

Fifty-nine members and guests were present for luncheon at 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Bess Miller, the society president, conducted the afternoon business meeting. Mrs. Leon Burket conducted the devotional service. Special music was furnished by a vocal trio composed of Mrs. Earl Bothe, Mrs. Day Welty and Mrs. Weed.

An auction of articles brought by the members netted a sum for the society's treasurer.

Next month, the members will meet at the Leon Burkett home for luncheon, an exchange of "secret pal" gifts, and election of new officers.

REPORT OF W. C. T. U.

W. C. T. U.—Mrs. R. F. Wullbrandt was hostess to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union on Tuesday afternoon. The devotional period was followed with a piano solo by Mrs. Wullbrandt. Mesdames Archie Klein Ida Hartman and Roy Finney sang "Resting In Jesus".

Reports of the sixty-eighth annual state convention, held in the First Methodist church, Aurora, Oct. 15-19 were given by the delegates, Miss Flora Seals and Mrs. Hettie Dawson.

Their reports showed the work done among the children and young people and in the departments of evangelism, religious education, flower mission and relief and soldiers and sailors, especially at Hines hospital, Great Lakes Training Station and Scott Field.

Recommendations for the coming year were read by the state president, Mrs. N. K. Fairbairn who urged us to prepare to meet the needs of the hour by more prayer and Bible study. One of the outstanding features of the convention was the speech contest in which seven contestants entered.

On Saturday evening a banquet was served to two hundred twenty-five delegates. Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, vice president of the national W. C. T. U. brought the message. Mrs. Colvin spoke again on Sunday afternoon from Isaiah 28.7. She said that history shows how one nation after another has fallen because of strong drink and stressed that we must have not only money, weapons, and food but sufficient man power who are physically fit in every way to win this war.

"Steps Toward the Solution of the Alcohol Problem" was the topic chosen by Rev. Harold L. Lundquist of the Moody Bible Institute for the Sunday evening meeting. He, as the other speakers, urged the strengthening of our spiritual forces.

On Saturday afternoon the new six stretcher ambulance, driven by four girls in uniform was there for our inspection. This ambulance was bought by the W. C. T. Unions of Illinois for $2500. At present is used only to carry blood banks.

On Dec. 1st, the Lee county W. C. T. U. will hold an institute in Dixon, speaker, Mrs. M. B. Rosenstiel of Freeport.

Rose Bowl Game Will Return to Pasadena

Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 6—(AP)—The Rose Bowl football game, transferred to the east coast last year when California went on an all-out war footing, will return to Pasadena next New Year's day, an unimpeachable source said today.

The Associated Press learned that the formal application has not yet been sent to the western defense command, but that it would be approved when it is received.

The source of the information cannot be disclosed.

The Army ordered cancellation of last year's contest in the midst of intensive war preparations throughout the west coast. The game was played on New Year's day at Durham, N. C., Oregon State defeating Duke, 20-16.

Russia Stronger Than Ever Before Says Her Premier

Joseph Stalin Praises Army on Anniveresary of Revolution

(By The Associated Press)

Moscow, Nov. 6—Joseph Stalin gravely told Russia's allies tonight that failure to open a second front would result in catastrophe for them and at the same time assured his people that there would be such an allied offensive "sooner or later".

He said that because of the lack of a second front the Germans had been able to break through the Russian lines last summer for their 300-mile eastward and southeastward drives which have carried them to the banks of the Volga, into Stalingrad, and deep into the Caucasus.

"I think no other army or country could stand up to such an onslaught", he said. Then, answering the question, "Will there be a second front?" he said.

"Yes, there will be one sooner or later because it is no less essential for our allies than us".

Stalin's 44-minute address to the Moscow soviet was in commemoration of the quarter-century anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution.

He said that it was not enough that allied resources were growing but that they must also be mobilized for victory.

"There are people who doubt that the British-Soviet-American coalition can mobilize all its resources.

"They say that as a result of our different social systems we cannot do this but I think this is not so.

Predicts Victory

"We must act in collaboration. The British-Soviet-American coalition has all the possibilities for victory and it will win".

The "moral and political reserves of the Germans in Europe are being exhausted" and the peoples are stirring, the premier said. "The enslaved nations are awaiting their turn to take revenge on the oppressors.

"They know that the Italian-German coalition is falling to pieces. They are banking on assistance from the democratic coalition. The moral and political reserves of that coalition are growing from day to day".

He said that "no sane man" would attempt to destroy Germany, "but we will destroy the Hitlerites' military power".

The second task after that, he said, would be to eliminate the "slave system which Germany calls the new order" and the third task would be to destroy the builders of this order.

The soviet premier told the meeting that never before had Russia been as strong and well-organized on the home front.

The break-through in the west, he said, came after the Red army had routed the Germans on the approaches to Moscow last winer, attacked and seized the offensive.

Returning a second time to mention of the second front, Stalin said that the Germans had been able to concentrate on one sector and take the initiative "because the absence of a second front in Europe enabled them to do it without risk to themselves".

Stalin asserted that the Russians recently had won possession of a German document showing that the nazi plan—nowhere realized—was to take Stalingrad last July 25, then Saratov Aug. 9, Kuibeshev Sept. 15 and Baku Sept. 29.

The main aim of the offensive was to finish the war this year by taking Moscow, Stalin added.

"In their hunt for oil and for Moscow, the German strategists have got into difficulties", he said.

"Their summer plans appear to have failed".

"The main reason of German success this year is the absence of a second front", Stalin said.

"If there had been a second front in Europe drawing away 60 German divisions as during the first World War, the position of the German armies today would be bad indeed".

Cites Germans' Aim

The Germans' aim in the southwestern drive was to divert the main soviet reserves in order to attack Moscow from the south, Stalin said.

He said the year had shown that the German army has its weaknesses.

"The Germans," he added, "are not strong enough to attack the southwest and north at the same time, like last summer, but are still strong enough to launch a serious attack in one direction."

Stalin noted that in the first World war, out of 220 German divisions then existing there were 85 on the Russian front.

"Now, however, this year, out of 256 divisions, 179 are on our front," he said.

"To this can be added 23 Rumanian, 14 Finnish, 10 Italian, 13 Hungarian, one Spanish and another division making, in all, 240 divisions altogether on our front against the Red army.

"The enemy's other troops are in occupied France, Norway and so forth. Part of them are in Libya, fighting against the British but only four German divisions and 11 Italian divisions, that is all.

Against 3,000,000 Men

"We have over 3,000,000 men arrayed against us.

"I think no other army or country could stand up to such an onslaught."

Replying to the rhetorical question, "will there be a second front?" Stalin gave this answer:

"Yes there will be one sooner or later because it is no less essential for our allies than for us."

"Our allies must understand that with France fallen the absence of a second front can mean catastrophe for them."

Contrasting axis and United Nations policies, Stalin gave this picture of the enemy home front:

"The moral and political reserves of the Germans in Europe are being exhausted. The peoples are rising.

"Enslaved nations are awaiting their turn to take revenge on their oppressors.

"They know the German-Italian coalition is falling to pieces.

"They are banking on assistance from the democratic coalition.

"The moral and poltical reserves of that coalition are growing from day to day."

Axis Shows Signs of Wary Watching for Other Fronts

Berlin Commentators on Fishing Trips Frequently Now

London, Nov. 6—(AP)—With Rommel's armies fleeing westward in Egypt under a threat of annihilation by the British Eighth Army, the axis showed signs today of a wary watch for new allied ventures which might imperil its position elsewhere in Africa and on the Mediterranean.

"The enemy is showing increasing uneasiness regarding allied movements to the south and west of Libya", the London Daily Telegraph commented.

For a third successive day the German radio talked, without confirmation, of a concentration of United Nations warships and transports at Gibraltar, estimating that 125 naval vessels had reached the small harbor there. Previous axis reports said American troops had reached Gibraltar.

Earlier this week the German commentator, Rear Admiral Luetzow, discussed on the Berlin radio the possibility of allied operations against North Africa, led by Americans, and a movement against Casablanca, from the west, that is, the Atlantic.

Vichy, France and Spain divide the control of North Africa. Casablanca is in French Morocco.

Other Comments

At the same time axis military commentators have been reporting a gathering of allied forces in the Chad area, due south of Tripoli, Libyan capital, and have noted the presence of a Fighting French force at Kufra Oasis, 400 miles south of Derna, Eastern Libya.

The Belgian newspaper Le Soir recently reported that Marshal Rommel had detached a portion of his African Corps to stand guard against attack from Kufra.

Anything less than complete destruction of Rommel's forces might be taken as an axis victory, the Evening Standard commented. To accomplish this, it noted, the British would have to drive in force across 1,000 miles of desert to Tunisia—a never-accomplished feat—or tackle the axis from the rear while he still is under frontal assault.

London observers saw in the potential complete occupation of North Africa the possibility of establishing a base for a second European front, reopening the Mediterranean to allied shipping and thus saving three-fourths of the sailing time to the Middle East and increasing aid to Russia both by releasing more material and delivering it faster.

death or surrender. Rommel, perhaps still hoping to achieve one of those near-miracles of recovery which gained him renown in happier times, is bent on saving his own armored corps at any cost to his confederates.

* * *

This will not be lost on Rome, where the Egyptian disaster already has produced premonitions of doom for Mussolini and his Roman empire. The United Nations leave no room for doubt that the Egyptian victory is merely the prelude to other campaigns to rid the whole African continent of the axis and restore domination of the Mediterranean to Britain and her allies. Then the soft underside of Hitler's Europe will be laid open to allied attack; Sicily and Sardinia will lie at the mercy of a constantly more powerful air and naval combination and the Italian homeland itself will be marked for conquest.

At this juncture Japan has summoned all her diplomats in Europe to conclave in Berlin. The announced purpose is to consider methods of more fruitful cooperation within the three-power alliance, but undoubtedly the entire question of the value to Japan of her German alliance will be under sober consideration.

From the outset there has been great doubt as to Japan's readiness to dovetail her strategic plans with those of her European partners. She is striving to create her own new order in the Orient and the fight in Europe and Africa has been little more than an opportunity offered by her gods to grab what she can while the white nations are at each other's throats. Those Japanese-sponsored reports from Turkey, of Tokyo's rejection of Hitler's harried call for a naval diversion in the Indian ocean, may be apocryphal, but there is little doubt that they indicate the basic Japanese attitude.

EGG "BATTLE

Abandon Italians;

lieve that our armored forces now have succeeded in getting behind some of the retreating German and Italian forces and that their retreat is virtually cut off.

("There are high hopes that we may be able to annihilate them completely without having to chase them across the Libyan desert as in other advances.")

The steady liquidation of Rommel's forces was recorded today in the official disclosure that his losses by capture alone now total more than 13,000 men and that at least 339 of his tanks have been knocked out.

The full measure of Rommel's defeat was indicated in a British communique which told of a roundup of large numbers of Italians afoot, apparently abandoned in their inland positions while the Germans on wheels or caterpillar trucks tried to save themselves by flight along the coastal road.

(Allied pressure of the axis' Mediterranean supply line was emphasized by the London Admiralty's report that six more axis vessels had been sunk and two damaged by British submarines.)

Announcement of the new allied successes indicated that the victorious Eighth Army had ground out an advance of 50 miles since breaking through the enemy's positions near El Alamein and dispatches from the front suggested that the battle of North Africa rapidly was degenerating into a race across the desert, with Rommel's forces trying desperately to escape utter destruction.

Montgomery confidently proclaimed a complete and absolute victory for the allies in Egypt and declared his troops would wipe out all the axis forces remaining in North Africa.

13,000 Prisoners

Official British figures placed axis prisoners at 13,000, and the number was growing hourly.

Among captives taken yesterday, a communique said, was the commander of the Italians' vaunted Trento division and his chief of staff.

(The authoritative British Press Association in London identified the Italian as General Francisco Scotti.)

The bulletin said a large number of Italians, apparently abandoned by fleeing German mechanized formations in the southern sector of the battlefield, were being rounded up.

Fifty-five Italian and 20 German tanks were reported destroyed yesterday, bringing the total knocked out by the British offensive to 339.

British submarines cooperating with the allied air forces in attacking Rommel's overseas supply lines, were credited officially with sinking six more axis vessels and damaging two others in the Mediterranean.

Free From Aerial Attack

The axis air forces appeared to have been virtually driven from the skies over Egypt, the British reporting that their troops were free from aerial attack yesterday while their own bombers hammered at the enemy almost unopposed.

Five enemy fighters which tried to intercept allied planes were shot down yesterday along with a small communications aircraft. Allied losses were put at four planes.

As the British Eighth Army pursued its advance across the desert, the potential battle area, limited heretofore to the narrow 40-mile front between the Mediterranean seacoast and the Qattara depression, widened steadily.

(A Reuters dispatch from Cairo said the battlefront already had doubled in length—a statement, which would indicate that fighting had progressed beyond Fuka.)

Burn Supply Dumps

Although some axis forces were reported yesterday to be holding out in isolated spots on the southern end of the Alamein line, Montgomery asserted that they would quickly be "put in the bag".

The British general called upon his armored formations to follow up the victory he proclaimed, striking at the retreating enemy with unremitting fury and thus insuring his complete destruction.

Allied bombers operating in endless relays, attacked the fleeing axis forces from dawn to dusk yesterday, paying special attention to the coastal road which is the enemy's main avenue of retreat.

Returning pilots reported breaches alongside this highway crowded with axis trucks and tanks, indicating that Rommel was using them as dispersal zones in an attempt to keep traffic moving along the bomb-pitted road.

Allied airmen observed many huge fires burning along the line of the axis retreat and it appeared the enemy was burning supply dumps.

RUSH REINFORCEMENTS

Ankara, Turkey, Nov. 5—(Delayed)—(AP)— Information received from Greece today said that the Germans, in a desperate attempt to bolster Field Marshal Rommel's retreating forces in Egypt, were using upwards of 500 planes to transport troops from near Athens, Greece, to an unknown German African base.

This information said the troops had been removed from the Russian front to near Athens.

An earlier report had said that four trainloads of German soldiers from the eastern front, transported through Rumania and Yugoslavia, had passed through Athens on Monday.

The newest advices said transport planes to speed the passage of the reinforcements to Africa had been in use since Tuesday.

Another report in the Turkish Capital was given circulation today by an informed Japanese quarter.

It said that a week ago Berlin had realized the perilous situation of the axis forces in Africa and Reichfuehrer Hitler had appealed to Tokyo for indirect aid in the form of a Japanese naval attack on Madagascar or South Africa which might compel a shift of strength southwards.

This report added that Tokyo turned down the appeal, stating it did not possess the required naval strength because of blows received from the U. S. Navy in the Southwest Pacific during the summer and fall.

Premier Stalin. Delivered on the eve of the 25th anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution, it expressed confidence that the troops would "deal a crushing blow to the enemy from Stalingrad".

Savagery of the conflict southeast of Nalchik, where the Russians are fighting to hold the routes leading to the Grozny oil fields and the strategic valley between the Caucasian mountain chains, was illustrated by an account from the soviet information bureau.

"In one sector", it said, "about half a regiment of infantry, supported by tanks, launched an attack on our strong points. Soviet troops met the enemy with artillery and mortar fire and, after losing 300 officers and men killed, the Germans retreated to their initial positions".

Progress was reported in the Russian counterdrive from Tuapse and the communique said 300 more invaders had been wiped out and prisoners and materiel captured.

Action somewhat heavier than usual was indicated far to the north, on the Leningrad front.

"Our snipers in three days killed 820 officers and men", the communique said.

About 800 enemy officers and men were declared annihilated northwest of Stalingrad, boosting German losses already estimated to include more than 100,000 killed and 800 tanks and 1,000 planes destroyed in the 73-day-old struggle for the city.

States warships still were active in the Solomons. They shelled Japanese positions on the north coast of Guadalcanal near Kokumbona the night of Nov. 3-4.

Army aircraft also continued to assault Japanese troops and supply dumps in the same area without opposition but no results of either the aerial or naval attacks were detailed.

Meantime, an appeal for a coordinated American naval and army command in the South Pacific was voiced here by Walter Nash, minister to the United States and the Pacific War Council from New Zealand.

Advocating unification "to get results," Nash asserted in a radio broadcast last night that "it is imperative that the United States commanders—General MacArthur and Admiral Halsey—work in close cooperation."

8-Ton Siege Gun Is Turned Over by N. U. for War Scrap

Relic From Fort Sumter Will Disappear From University Campus

Northwestern university's memorial to its students who fought in the Civil War, a 16,020-pound siege gun used at Fort Sumter in the early days of that war, was presented today to the government for use as scrap iron. The eight-ton cannon, favorite of campus photographs for nine college generations, has stood guard under campus trees between Harris hall and Fayerweather hall since it was given to the university as a graduation gift by the class of 1905.

The decision to donate the gun for scrap was jointly made this week by the university and by representatives of the class of 1905. Frank Spencer, president of the Northwestern University Alumni Association, who as a member of the class of 1905, said: "A university cherishes its traditions, and this cannon has been a tradition at Northwestern for 37 years. Naturally, we regret seeing it leave the campus. However, we are sure that the men whom the gun commemorates would, if they were alive today, agree fully with the decision that has been made".

When the cannon was obtained from Fort Wadsworth by the class of 1905, it was considered such a fine memorial to the brave students who fought in the Civil War that the university trustees allowed the class to select the site for the gift. A ridge just west of Fayerweather hall at the south end of the campus was chosen and for 37 years the slumbering monster has there paid a silent tribute to the university's Civil War heroes.

Shells Also Scrapped

The gun is erected on a massive masonry foundation with a base of concrete work 16 feet square, and points in a southeasterly direction toward Lake Michigan. A pyramid of shells, which will also be donated in the scrap drive, has been piled on one side of the platform. On the opposite side attached to the stone work is a bronze tablet bearing the simple inscription: "In Honor of Those Northwestern Students Who Served in the Civil War. Erected by the Class of 1905".

The cannon has provided students with a vivid reminder of those turbulent days in the '60s when virtually all of Northwestern's student body marched off to fight for the Union. The tumultuous Civil War years shattered the routine of the university, then in its infancy. After the fall of Fort Sumter in 1861, faculty and students held a meeting in the little wooden Methodist church. Fiery speeches were delivered; the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung with patriotic ferver; and students, flushed with excitement, advanced to add their names to the muster roll.

After the Union Army's defeat at Bull Run, a more solemn atmosphere prevaded the university. Girls spent their days cutting bandages for the soldiers, and most of the remaining male students joined the colors.

Graduates to Battle

There were but two members of the graduating class in 1863 and one of these had been rejected by the medical examiner. During the next year the University Guards were organized and, receiving permission to leave their school work, the 20 members marched off to war. That year there was no commencement—the entire class had gone off to battle.

In spite of its small size Northwestern made an admirable record in the Civil War. In all, seventy-seven university men enlisted, 42 graduates and 35 students. Their bravery and effective leadership is shown by the fact that 25 of them became officers as follows: Four chaplains, eight lieutenants, five captains, three adjutants, two majors, and three colonels. Seven were killed in battle.

Today with 241 faculty and staff members and more than 3500 alumni in the armed services and with all of its facilities dedicated to aiding in the war effort, Northwestern university continues to contribute its utmost to the nation.

Unionists Plead Guilty to Assault Charges

McLeansboro, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—Five members of the AFL Common Laborers' union pleaded guilty and paid $25 fines in County court yesterday on charges of assaulting Sheriff S. W. Shepherd in a labor disturbance near here last March 31.

Charges of rioting were dismissed. The men were Evan Dale of Carbondale; Donald Hungate, Cairo; Sheridan Wheeler, McLeansboro; Lawrence Pryor, Vienna, and Medley Flannigan, McLeansboro.

The sheriff was severely injured when he intervened in an attempt by union members to prevent non-union laborers from unloading pipe for a new refinery.

Shortage of Doctors Not Threatened in Ill.

Marion, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—Dr. Edward H. Weld, Rockford, president of the Illinois State Medical society, says the armed services' demand for medical men doesn't threaten a shortage of doctors in Illinois.

Speaking before the 69th annual meeting of the Southern Illinois Medical society here last night, Dr. Weld said that in Illinois there were enough doctors past the age for military service to fill all civilian needs for medical care.

Lt. Col. R. F. Olmstead, Chicago, assistant chief of the military personnel branch of the sixth service command, speaking on "the doctor and the war effort", urged all doctors of military age to apply for commissions at once and warned they would be drafted if they failed to seek commissions.

State Lumber Dealers Join Salvage Drive

Chicago — Approximately 900 members of the Illinois Lumber and Material Dealers' Association have joined the statewide scrap drive, George M. Eisenberg and Walter V. McAdoo, Jr., co-chairmen of the salvage division, Illinois State Council of Defense, said today.

Some association members are serving as scrap dealers in areas that do not have regular scrap dealers, McAdoo said. Others will use their facilities to pick up and weigh scrap from farm homes. Most of the association members already are serving on local scrap committees, he said.

McAdoo reiterated the state council's assertion that much scrap still remains on farms. "For instance," he said, "one farmer, convinced he had thoroughly cleaned up his farm, was amazed when salvage spotters discovered another ton of metal on his land."

Chileans Call for Break With Powers

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 6—(AP)—Thousands of representatives of the pro-democratic forces which elected President Juan Antonio Rios called for a break with the axis and alignment of Chile beside the United Nations in demonstrations last night.

Bearing flags and slogans, masses of men and women shouted vivas for the democracies and "Muera el Fascismo" (death to fascism) on the plaza before the presidential palace.

Approximately 20,000 persons made up an orderly parade through the center of the Capital to the plaza.

STUDENTS CUT WOOD

Iberia, Mo., Nov. 6—(AP)—Iberia College students cut classes to go cutting.

The school in the Ozarks hills uses wood for fuel. The wood pile dwindled and no woodcutters could be found.

One-day recess was called. The students chopped enough wood to last through the winter.

French Parachutists Bag 100 Axis Planes

London, Nov. 6—(AP)—Fighting French parachute soldiers have dropped far behind the axis' desert lines and knocked out almost 100 planes on enemy airfields, Reuters reported today in a dispatch from Beirut, Lebanon.

It said the parachutists were picked men from a corps of highly trained specialists who had made forays at Barka, near Bengasi, and Martuba, 60 miles northwest of Tobruk.

Their casualties, it said, including those incurred in one overseas raid on Crete, have been one killed, four prisoners and 13 missing. (The dispatch did not indicate how the men were able to return or to report back to their bases. Boats might pick them up on the coast.)

Vichy Forces Cease Madagascar Fighting

London, Nov. 6—(AP)—Vichy forces opposing the British in southeast Madagascar asked for an armistice and hostilities ceased at 2 p. m (Madagascar time) yesterday, an authoritative source announced today.

The only recent fighting on the huge island in the Indian ocean has been in the southeastern section, so the armistice, in effect, terminates the Madagascar campaign.

Murphy Optimistic About U. S. Chances

Boston, Nov. 6—(AP)—Associate Justice Frank Murphy of the United States Supreme court, who trained for four months with the American Army as a lieutenant colonel during the past summer, has said that he was confident that the United States could clutter the streets of the Japanese controlled cities of the far east with American tanks.

The United States "is building an unbeatable army," Justice Murphy declared at a press conference. "There are no tanks like ours. We've seen the tanks of the other countries and there is no comparison."

"We ought to be able to beat anybody in production," the former Detroit mayor commented.

U. S. Fighters Shoot Down 3 Enemy Planes

With American Forces in China, Nov. 5—(Delayed)—(AP)—United States fighters intercepted 26 Japanese aircraft striking toward an AEF airdrome in China recently and shot down three fighters and a bomber.

Capt. John D. Lombard of Ionia, Mich., got an enemy plane.

Army Plane Crash at Memphis Kills One

Memphis, Nov. 6—(AP)—One man was killed and another injured seriously early today when an Army airplane crashed near the Memphis airport.

The men were identified tentatively as Raphael Clyde Clayton of Olive Branch, Miss., who died shortly after being admitted to a hospital, and J. Norman Rhew of Memphis, in a critical condition from fractures and burns.

The plane cracked up about five miles from the Memphis ariport during unfavorable flying weather.

Army officials declined immediate comment except to say a plane, with two men aboard, had crashed nearby.

Illinois Soldier Commits Suicide

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The body of Private James Nolan, 39, a member of a technical school squad at Scott Field, Ill., was found slumped over a gas range in the Brooklyn home of a sister early today, police reported.

Police said Nolan committed suicide, adding that his sister, Kathleen Nolan, told them Nolan had been AWOL for a week.

Illinois Receives First Allocation of Plasma

Chicago—Five hundred units of dried blood plasma allocated by the federal government, the first to be received in Illinois, have been placed in strategic locations for civilian use during emergencies, Dr. H. L. Pettitt, emergency medical service coordinator, Illinois State Council of Defense, reported to Gov. Green today.

One hundred units, each unit representing a pint of blood from west coast donors, have been stored in five Illinois communities. They are Danville, Joliet, Savanna, Rock Island, and Carbondale.

This marks the first time since Pearl Harbor that dried blood plasma has ben stored in the state, Dr. Pettitt said. Dried blood plasma is more desirable than liquid or frozen plasma, he said, because it can be kept indefinitely. Liquid plasma loses its value after a year, while frozen plasma must be kept under refrigeration.

Dr. Pettitt said the state department of health will have 3,000 units of dried blood plasma processed in the near future to be made available to other Illinois communities. The plasma, he said, is stored by health departments, hospitals, and medical service coordinators of councils of defense.

13 American Pilots in China on Way to Join Select Circle

New Delhi, India, Nov. 6—(AP)—With two fliers already rated as aces, 13 more American pilots in the China air task force are on their way to the goal of bagging at least five Japanese planes, according to a listing today in the CBI Roundup, AEF newspaper.

Capt. Albert J. Baumler of Bayonne, N. J., became this theater's first U. S. Army Air Force ace on Sept. 3 when he shot down his fifth plane.

Col. Robert L. Scott of Macon, Ga., shot down his fifth victim Sept. 25 but since then has scored another victory to lead the field.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 6—(AP)—Illinois sales tax collection for October were $6,709,895, a drop of 12 per cent from the same month last year.

Gasoline and oil production tax receipts also declined, the state finance department announced, while liquor and public utility taxes increased. Collections last month were:

Motor fuel tax $3,149,070, a decrease of 18.7 per cent from October last year; oil production tax, $318,299, down 37 per cent; liquor taxes, $2,574,173, an increase of 49 per cent; public utility gross receipts tax, $902,841, up 3.2 per cent; cigaret tax, $1,168,733, down 3.3 per cent.

The big jump in liquor tax receipts was attributed to widespread "stocking up" on liquors in advance of the increased federal taxes which became effective Nov. 1.

Grade Pupils Aid Uncle Sam

In answer to Uncle Sam's call to get out and "get in the scrap" the members of the Mt. Morris Grade School Junior Third Army have made a splendid record. The large pile of scrap located back of the baseball backstop on the grade school playground is fitting testimony to the loyalty of this Junior Army. According to the latest figures a total of 34,430 pounds of scrap metal and 1440 pounds of rubber has been collected. Every barn, garage, shed, basement and attic in this community was searched in quest of the much needed scrap. At the suggestion of our government a Junior Third Army was organized permitting the pupils to attain certain ranks through the collection of scrap. This has proved to be a great incentive and is largely responsible for the enthusiastic efforts of the grade school pupils. The set-up of the various ranks in this Junior Third Army and the scrap required for the various ranks is as follows:

General—2000 pounds.
Lieutenant General — 1750 pounds.
Major General—1500 pounds.
Brigadier General—1250 pounds.
Colonel—1000 pounds.
Major—750 pounds.
Captain—500 pounds.
1st Lieutenant—250 pounds.
2nd Lieutenant—1000 pounds.
Sergeant—50 pounds.
Corporal—25 pounds.
P. F. C.—10 pounds.
Private—Any contribution.

Space does not permit the listing of all who have made outstanding records in this scrap drive but we have two pupils who reached the rank of General. They are Marie Colvin and Gene Medlar. The total by grades is as follows: Eighth grade, 14,741 pounds of scrap and 575 pounds of rubber; seventh grade, 9557 pounds of scrap, 354 pounds of rubber; sixth grade, 6382 pounds of scrap and 167 pounds of rubber; fifth grade, 1509 pounds of scrap and 29 pounds of rubber; all other grades, 2241 pounds of scrap and 319 pounds of rubber. This makes a total of approximately 125 pounds of scrap for each pupil in the school, a record of which we can all be justly proud.

School Pupils Cooperate

The grade school and high students cooperated with the civic authorities and business men in an excellent manner on Hallowe'en evening. In order for the students to do their part in the war effort, the student council in the high school recommended to all high school students and the eighth grade recommended to all the students in grade school that the soaping of windows should be eliminated this year during the Hallowe'en period. This was observed almost a hundred per cent by school pupils. A few of the smaller children of the community placed only a few marks on the windows of the local stores. The student leaders also recommended that the iron and junk which has been piled up by the local scrap committee should not be scattered over the community on Hallowe'en night. Also, that no property damage of any type should be carried out this year. The students observed these suggestions in an excellent manner and need to be congratulated on their fine spirit of cooperation.

The students in the local schools have proved in many different ways that they are willing to do their part in helping, in the war effort and also to help the local business man and industrial companies in the labor problem. The school officials have received many words of praise from business men and residents of the community concerning the fine cooperation of the school pupils.

For the first time in its history American Education Week will be observed this year with the nation at war. It is most appropriate that this twenty-second annual observance should be devoted to the theme "Education For Free Men".

American Education Week grew out of conditions revealed by the first World War. Twenty-five per cent of the men examined in the draft were found to be illiterate and twenty-nine per cent were physically unfit in the last World war. Because of this condition, the National Education Association, the American Legion and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, planned for one week of each school year to be set aside to stimulate the interest of every American citizen in public education. This practice has been followed for the past twenty-two years during the week of Armistice.

The schools are playing a vital part in the nation's war effort. In two years they have trained more than three million men and women for the war industries. They are giving renewed emphasis to the knowledge, skills, and qualities needed in the armed services. The schools are placing new emphasis upon mathematics, science and health programs. They are encouraging conservation, promoting the sales of war stamps and bonds, teaching first aid, assisting in the various rationing programs, developing a high morale, and doing many other essential tasks. While assuming these new responsibilities, the schools are carrying forward their regular programs, seeking to keep the lives of the pupils well balanced. The main contribution children and high school students can make is simply to grow into strong and efficient Americans and to carry out any task that they are capable of doing.

The general theme for American Education Week is "Education For Free Men". The topics for the week are: Renewing Faith in Democracy, Serving War Time Needs, Building Strong Bodies, Developing Loyal Citizens, Cultivating Knowledge and Skills and Establishing Sturdy Character and Strengthening Morale for Victory.

The local high school is carrying out the following programs on the various days during American Education Week:
